BIOCENTURY CONFERENCES

BioCentury is widely acknowledged in the life science corporate and investment communities for pioneering four annual conferences that provide turf-neutral venues for biopharma investors, pharmaceutical licensing professionals and corporate executives to conduct business. After nearly two decades on Wall Street, 17 years in Europe, and three years in China, these events are distinguished for the quality of their audiences and the support of global financial institutions and professional service collaborators.

Future Leaders in the Biotech Industry, held each spring, and NewsMakers in the Biotech Industry, held each fall, each attract hundreds of Wall Street investors and pharma licensing executives to see biopharma companies that have been independently reviewed and selected by BioCentury. The New York City conferences were launched in 1994.

BioEquity Europe, launched in 2000, is dedicated to expanding the capital markets for European biotech. Co-organized with EBD Group and the Biotechnology Industry Organization (BIO), this spring conference has become Europe's top networking venue for life science investors, pharmaceutical licensing executives and investor-validated European biotech companies.

The BioCentury China Healthcare Summit gathers top thinkers from industry, academia and finance to identify who will lead China's biopharma innovation ecosystem, how innovation will be funded, and the business strategies required to transform both domestic and multinational biopharmas as China advances its innovation agenda.

BIOCENTURY HISTORY

BioCentury, Inc. was founded in 1992 by David Flores, President & CEO, and Karen Bernstein, Ph.D., Chairman. Their goal was to create a "first-in-class" biotech-focused business journal that would provide independent, authoritative intelligence built on in-depth and accurate reporting. Their mission was — and remains — to identify and communicate the essential scientific, business, financial and public policy actions required to successfully bring progressive medical solutions to patients.

The first issue of BioCentury was launched in January 1993. The analysis-rich journal became the cornerstone of an enterprising media business that now touches decision makers and thought leaders in industry, government and the financial community around the world.
